DO YOU HAVE A STORY TO SHARE?

Magnum Photos is a highly respected photo agency which was founded in 1947 by four renowned photographers in the aftermath of World War Two.

In celebration of its 70th anniversary, Magnum Photos, in collaboration with the Museum of London, will be documenting life in and around Clerkenwell as part of a live exhibition at the Magnum Print Room in Gee Street from May 8-21.

Three photographers will explore the area over the two week period - each from an entirely different perspective. Their daily experiences will build an exhibition documenting life in Clerkenwell and its environs.

One of the themes we will be exploring is Clerkenwell's rich history as a place of hope for people seeking new lives. We would love to hear from anyone whose connection with Clerkenwell is the result of conflict, persecution or economic aspiration. Participation in this project would involve sharing your story with British documentary photographer, Olivia Arthur and having your portrait taken. In return you will receive a beautiful print to cherish. We are particularly interested in meeting people who came to the UK as a result of World War Two or any of the conflicts which have raged to the present day.

If you or anyone you know would like to participate in this exploration of modern history and the people who make Clerkenwell the vibrant hub of creativity it is today, please email us at: 2annagormley@gmail.com
